Select fluide of Oriental Wei Porting and Windom. Sity of Constantinople ali Printed by W. Richardson and J. Clark, With Remarks on the AND THE TURKS. Tondon C MDCCLXVII Mugrave

MVSEVM BRITTAN NICVM

PREFACE.

we write, whatever we read, late our own thoughts; and the of the greatest knownity to relate points which are requires great indulgence: for it really can ferve but for two S England contains men ledge, it is a mere vaalready well known. Whatever purpoles; the first is, to circufecond, to catch the admiration of the ignorant. Bur if we carry our criticism to so great an extent it will be going too far. Every traveller is fome how fingular in his obfervations, all men not having the fame genrus. THE relation in these sheets is short and contracted, but to those of a liberal education, I hope, full enough; what I faw in my travels recalled flrongly to my remembrance the claffical erudition debar myself the pleafure of erudition I was fo happy as to receive at Eton College. I am a deeper studies; and as I did not great admirer of good poetry; it is a fweet refreshment from playing with it in the original draught (though perhaps too often) I have not erafed it in the press. I hope it will not prove difagreeable; but I am no author, have a variety of affairs to attend on, as well as a very indifferent state of health.

I WROTE

ment, without any thoughts of their publication. I have not they may be of use, I have nals for my own private amufehad the least affistance therein, confequently they must be full of incorrectness. However, as permitted them to be published. I WROTE the following jourA VOYAGE

VOYAGE

FROM of or beg

NAPLES through the ARCHES to Constantinopes,

IN THE YEAR 1763. board a Dato's vessel faired at the

. In 151, Cottlesammi bus Cura sit, atque omnes, cultusque, habitusque locorum. Ventos et varium Cœli prædicere morem, TOYAGES by sea are so much land, that it is well enough faid, by sea one may go ten miles in an hour, or be ten hours in going one mile, according to the wind. We fet more uncertain than those by out in the most favourable month in stantly so contrary, that we were the year; but the wind was conobliged to be calting anchor almost continually.

[2]

Mar the 4th we embarked on board a Dutch vessel hired for the voyage, about ten o'clock at night, and immediately fet fail.

Luna negat; splendet tremulo sub lumine pon-Afpirant aura in noctem; nec candida curfum.

Vincla recufantum, & fera fub nocte rudentum; Urit odoratam nocturna in lumina cedrum, Proxima Circze raduntur littora terte, Assiduo resonat cantu, techisque superbis Arguto tenues percurrens pectine telas. Hinc exaudiri gemitus, iræque leonum Dives inaccellos ubi Solis filia lucos

3

Sævire, ac formæ magnorum ululare luporum. Bengerique sues, atque in præsepibus urff

From hence were heard (rebellowing to the main) And herds of howling wolves that stun the The grunts of briftled boars, and groans of bears, A dang'rous coast: the goddess wastes her days In spinning, or the loom, the spends the night, Now near the thelves of Girce's thores they run, In joyous fongs, the rocks refound her lays: Serenely (hone the stars, the moon was bright, And the sea trembled with her filver light. From land a gentle breeze arofe by night, And cedar brands supply her father's light. (Girce the rich, the daughter of the Sun) The roars of lions that refuse the chain, failors ears.

people, that it formerly was the delight of a WE left, with a fair wind, the city of Naples, of which I shall only fay, B 2 people, and their emperors, who governed the universe.

F. 401

Quomare, quo terræ, quo sydus currit utrumque; Jam peragrabantur; si quis sinus abditus ultra, Si qua foret tellus, quæ fulvum mitteret aurum PETRON. ARBIT. Orbem jam totum, wictor Romanus habebat, Nec satiatus erat; gravidis freta pulfa carinis Querebant opes: non vulgo nota placebant Hostis erat; fatisque in tristia bella paratis, Gaudia, non usu plebeia trita voluptas.

Romans possessed the whole world, as far as the earth, the ocean, or the stars could reach; and yet were not satisfied. The sea struck with heavy loaden ships was yet undiscovered, which might produce gold, They were explored; if any bay, if any land, remained to enter into the most horrid wars in fearch of wealth, and could no longer endure it was confidered as an enemy. The victorious

nommos

common enjoyments, or the trite pleafures in plebeian use.

4 fight; the fun casting its rays on the colours at its first appearance in the In the morning we found ourfelves ful; whichever way a landscape painter greatest variety of objects I ever saw; the different light and shade, the prifmatic teints which this fountain of all be expressed. The prospects in this neighbourhood are exceeding beautiing picture. Rocks, seas, mountains, volcanos, ruins of cities, baths, bridges, turns his eye, he isstruck with a charmporticos, temples and palaces, are elebecalmed off the island of Capra. think I never beheld fo entertaining gave them, is impossible horizon gantly,

B 3

the Vefuvius, with which it is thought gantly, by accident, here alone found stately cities, men, women, children, cattle, villages, vines, country feats, springing up drove us from the beautiful coast of Naples; and about midnight we were all on deck to fee the Strombolo, a mountain which stands in the sea like a sugar-loaf, and from its its afpect at sea is more terrible than to have a connection, as well as with mount Atna, the greatest of all these fire mountains; the which nevertheless lofty fummit emits continual flames; is at most times covered with snow. A fresh mingled with ships, boats, trees, and pasture.

Interdumque afram prorumpit ad æthera nubem, --- Horrificis juxta tonat Ætna ruinis:

[4]

Attollitque globos flammarum, & sidera lambit, Cum gemitu glomerat, fundoque exafluat imo. Turbine fumantem piceo, & candente favilla, Interdum scopulos, avustaque viscera montis, Erigit eructans, liquefactaque faxa sub auras

And fhiver'd by the force come piece-meal down. And flakes of mounting flames, that lick the fky. DRIPEN. Oft from her bowels maffy rocks are thrown, By turns hot embers from her entrails fly; is to the foot of thundring Ærna join'd. By turns a pitchy cloud the rolls on high; Fed from the fiery springs that boil below. Oft liquid lakes of burning fulphur flow,

KEEPING on our course, as well as we could, in that uneafy unnatural posture which is called gunnel-to, we passed by the cavern of old Eskis, but not without being buffeted by his myrmidons.

BA

Nimborum

_ 8 _

Nimborum in patriam, loca fœta furentibus Auftris,

Luctantes ventos, tempestatesque sonoras Eoliam venit; hic vallo rex Eolus antro Imperio premit.

THE RESERVE THE PARTY OF THE

With pow'r imperial curbs the struggling winds, The reftless regions of the florms she fought; Thus rag'd the goddels, and with fury fraught, And founding tempefts in dark prifons binds. The tyrant Rolus from his airy throne, Where in a spacious cave of living stone, ing into either. WE had a very stormy disagreeable passage to Sicily, yet sailed between Scylla and Charybdis (two places now-a-days not worth notice) without fall-pression has this horrible calamity left before a commissary, although we which prefents to view a most elegant five quay; but is within a miserable oity, void of inhabitants, the plague fome few years fince having almost on their minds, that we were obliged to go to the lazaret, and pais in review brought passports from Naples, and had taken many other precautions to On the 10th we arrived at Mefina, depopulated it; and so great an imfaçade of stone building on an extenavoid its common to the season

versity of the currents and narrowness trouble choly city; and, on account of the diof the gulf, passed through, with much the 15th we left this melan-NO trouble, this channel, which divides Sicily and the coast of Calabria. On the 17th, whilft we were contemplating the lofty Ætna, which we a florm from the fouth eaft, violent had left behind us, we were met by enough to have wrecked us. Cum mare sub nochem, tumidis albescere coepit Egerit hic fluctus; æquorque refundit in æquor: Hie rapit antennas. Quæ dum fine lege geruntur; Bella gerunt venti, fretuque indignantia miscent, Sponte tamen properant alii subducere remos; Fluctibus; et præceps sperare valentius Eurus. Aspera crescit hyems; omnique e parte seroces Hic jubet; impediunt adversæ jussa procellæ; Clamat : & antennis totum subnectite velum, Nec sinit audiri vocem fragor æquorls ullam. Ardua, jamdudum, demittite cornua, rector Pars munire latus; pars ventis vela negare.

[10]

Ipfa quoque bis agitur vicibus Trachinia puppis e Nunc, ubi demissam curvum circumstetit æquor. Undarum incurfu gravis unda, tonitribus æther. Despicere in valles, imumque Acheronta videtur. Sternitur interdum, fpumisque sonantibus albet. Et modò cum fulvas ex imo vertit arenas Concolor est illis; Stygià modo nigrior undâ: Scire ratis rector; nec quid jubeatve, vetetve: Pectore in arma feri, prætentaque tela leones; Fluctibus erigitur, coelumque æquare videtur Pontus; et inductas afpergine tangere nubes. Suspicere inferno fummum de gurgite cœlum. Sæpe dat ingentem fluctu latus icha fragorem: The pavet; nec fe, qui sit status ipse fatetur Quippe fonant clamore viri, stridore rudentes, Tanta mali moles, totaque potentior arte est. Nec levius pulsata sonat, quam ferreus olim. Ibat in arma ratis multoque erat altior illis. Cum laceras aries baliftave concutit arces, Et modo sublimis veluti de vertice montis Utque folent, fumptis incurfu viribus, ire Sic ubi se ventis admiserat unda coortis,

Jamque

[12]

Jamque labant cunei, spoliataque tegmine ceræ Inque plagas cœli tumefactum adfcendere pontum. Aquoreæ miscentur aquæ. Caret ignibus æther; Cum fæpe affiluit: defensæ mænibus urbis, 1820 185 Vela madent nimbis; et cum cœlestibus undis Cæcaque nox premitur tenebris, hyemifque, fuisque, Rima patet; præbetque viam letalibus undis. Dat quoque jam saltus intra cava texta carinæ Pars maris intus erat; trepidant haud fegnius omnes, Discuriunt tamen has, præbentque micantia lumen Fulmina: fulmineis ardefcunt ignibus undæ. Inque fretum credas totum descendere cœlum: Nec prius ablistit fessam oppugnare carinam; Ecce cadunt largi resolutis nubibus imbres: Fluctus: &, ut miles numero præftantior omni, Spe potitur tandem; laudisque accensus amore Quam solet urbs, aliis murum fodientibus extra Inter mille viros, murum tamen occupat unus. Vastius infurgens decimæ ruit impetus undæ: Pars igitur tentabat adhuc invadere pinum; Quam velut in captæ descendat moenia navis. Sic ubi pulsarunt acres latera ardua fluctus,

Atque

[13]

Bracchiaque ad cœlum, quod non vidit, irrita tollens Huic cum pignoribus domus, & quod cuique re-Atque allis murum, trepidare, tenentibus intus. Deficit ars; animique cadunt, totidemque videntur Funera quos maneant: hic votis numen adorat: Quot veniunt fluctus, ruere atque irrumpere mortes. Non tenethic lacrymas: stupethic: vocatille beatos, Poscit open : subeunt illi frattesque parensque, anni lichum eft.

Gaudet abeste tamen. Patriæ guoque vellet ad oras Omne latet conlum: duplicataque noctis imago est. Frangitur & regimen, spolitique animosa superstans Nulla nifi Halcyone eft : &, cum defideret unam, Respicere, inque domum supremos vertere vultus; Fervet: & inducta piccis e nubibus umbra Unda, velut vichrix, sinuatas despicit undas. Nec levius, quam si quis Athon Pindumve revulsos Mergit in ima ratem. Cum qua pars magna virorum Verum ubi sit nescit. Tanta vertigine pontus Præcipitata ruit: pariterque & pondere & ichu, Gurgite Halcyone Gëyca movet: Cëycis in ore Sede fua totos in apertum everterit æquor, Frangitur incurfu nimbosi turbinis arbos;

[14]

Functa suo est. Alii partes & membra carinz Trunca tenent. Tenet ipfe manu, qua sceptra Gurgite pressa gravi, neque in aera reddita, fato folebat

Invocat (heu!) frustra. Fragmina navigii Ceyx: socerumque patremque

The cite of bod see may a very

Like heralds, first denounce the watry war. The fea grew white, the rolling waves from far,

Some flow their oars, or flop the leaky fides, and Each in his way, officioufly they wrought; Th' intruding feas, and waves ejects on waves. And furl your fails: the winds repel the found, And in the speaker's mouth the speech is drown'd. Another bolder yet the yard belltides, And folds the fails; a fourth with labour laves This seen, the master soon began to cry, Yet of their own accord, as danger taught Strike, strike the top-fail; let the main-sheet fly,

In this confusion while their work they ply, The winds augment the winter of the flry, Are tofs'd, and mingled, as their tyrants pleafe. And wage intestine wars; the fuff'ring seas

[15]

Seas dash on seas, and clouds encounter clouds: The cries of men are mix'd with rattling shrowds; With fuch a concourse comes the flood of ill; The forky light ungs flash, the roaring thunders roll. At once from east to well from pole to pole, Of safety, stands amaz'd with stupid care, Nor what to bid, or what forbid he knows, Th' ungovern'd tempelt to fuch fury grows: The mafter would command, but in defpair Vain is his force, and vainer is his fkill;

And change their colour, changing their difeafe. Like various fits the Trachian vessel finds: The Stygian dye the tainted waters take : Now waves on waves afcending scale the skies, And from the clouds beholds the nether fky; And now sublime the rides upon the winds; As from a lofty fummit looks from high, And when the fouler bottom frews the black, When yellow fands are fifted from below, The glitt'ting hillows give a golden show: And in the fires above the water fries: Then frothy white appear the flatted feas,

NOM

このとう ここでもなることになる

[16]

Now from the depth of hell they lift their fight, With force augmented, bears against his prey, Sidelong to seize: or unappall'd with fear, The lashing billows make a loud report, Springs on the toils, and rufhes on the spear : And beat her sides, as batt'ring rams a fort: So feas impell'd by winds, with added pow'r Assault the sides, and o'er the hatches tow'r. And at a diffance fee superior light; Or as a lion bounding in his way,

The fails are drunk with show'rs, and drop with The planks (their pitchy cov'rings wash'd away) One rifing, falling one, the heav'ns and fea Now yield; and now a yawning breach difplay: And ocean fwell'd with waters upwards tends; Mean time in sheets of rain the sky descends, Rush through the ruins of her gaping side. Meet at their confines, in the middle way: The roaring waters with a hostile tide

Sweet waters mingle with the briny main. No flar appears to lend his friendly light: Darknefs and tempest make a double night;

一个一

And while the lighntings blaze, the water burne. But flashing fires disclose the deep by turns,

Sweeps all before him with impetuous fway, With envy hear their fellows conqu'ring shout, The city, thus become the feat of war. Makes way for others, and an hoft alone And from the walls defcends upon the prey; And mount on others backs, in hopes to fhare Part following enter, part remain without, Still preffes on, and origing gains the town; Now all the waves their featter'd force unite; So while th' invading billows come a breaft, The hero tenth advanc'd before the rest, And as a foldier foremoft in the fight,

One weeps, and yet despairs of late relief; of orth frield o The faitors run in heaps, a helplefs croud; Art fails, and courage falls, no fuecour near; And calls those happy whom their fun'rals wait. One with loud fhrieks laments his loft effate, One cannot weep, his fears congeal his grief, But stupid with dry eyes expects his fate: As many waves, as many deaths appear. An universal cry refounds aloud,

This

This wretch with pray'rs and vows the gods implores, His careful father, and his faithful spouse. The covetous worldling in his anxious mind, That other on his friends his thoughts bellows, Thinks only on the wealth he left behind. And ev'n the fkies he cannot fee, adores.

All Cays his Aleyand employs,

He fought, but in the dark tempeltuous night His wife he withes, and would still be near, So whirl the feas, fuch darkness blinds the sky. Not her with him, but withes him with her :-Now with last looks he seeks his native shore, Which fate has destin'd him to see no more; For her he grieves, yet in her absence joys: That the black night receives a deeper dye. He knew not whither to direct his fight.

Proud of her conqueft gain'd, infults the waves One billow mounts, and with a fcornful brow, The giddy thip ran round; the tempest tore Her mast, and over-board the rudder bore,

below :

Pindus and Athos with the freight thay hore, Nor lighter falls, than if some giant tore.

1 61

And tols'd on feas; prefs'd with the pond'rous ,wold

Some few on fcatter'd planks, with fruitless care, Lay hold, and swim; but while they swim, despair. Down finks the ship within th' abyls below: Now grafps a floating fragment in his hand: Ev'n he who late a scepter did command, And while he struggles on the stormy main, Down with the vessel sink into the main Invokes his father, and his wife, in vain. The many, never more to rife again.

DRYDEN.

while fifteen miles distant from the island of The florm however abating, on the 20th we discovered that we were fallen and Sidona, on the coast of Albany. in with the islands of Fano, Marlera, The next day we came to an anchor at a place called Our lady of Callopo, Corfu. About two in the morning, whilft we were endeavouring to get a little repose, after being up four or five nights, on account of the weather, fair from the coast of Albany; but on the ship's being alarmed, and the firing fome cannon and fmall arms, they made a retreat with precipitation from we were fuddenly attacked by a corwhence they came.

[20]

harbour of Corfu, which is a beautiful island, and the fortifications are kept THE next day we came into the in a condition to make a vigorous defence. I enquired after, but could hear no tidings of, those delightful gardens of king Alcingus, which were said formerly to have been here, and wherein he entertained Ulyfles after his fhipwreck. thipwreck. The garrifon confifts of proveditor, and has the command of ro,000 foldiers; the governor is called all the Venetian islands; he received us with the greatest politeness; and lives in, and treated us with, great magnificence. On the 26th we quitted this place winds to bring to at a small distance off and on for three days, we were in company with a feventy gun ship, commanded by a Venetian nobleman called Molin; but were obliged by foul from the harbour, and after coafting forced to do the fame under the island, place called Famara di Leschina, which we quitted on the 30th in tow by the ship of war.

C 3

_ 22 _

Cepbalonia, and there parted from the On the 2d we reached the island of other ship.

of Ithaca, the country of Ulyfes; it CEPHALONIA is a near neighbour ed the best in Europe; some of these abounds with variety of botanical plants and flowers, which are efteemflowers being cropt by the goats and thefe excellent herbs liquors of the sheep, gild their teeth with an extraordinary lustre: they prepare also from fineft flavour.

able fountains of pitch. The ladies FROM hence we steered to Zante, in which island there are two remarkhere never flir out of their houses without being muffled up, wearing black malks on their faces, so that there is went on shore to the English conful's. at whose house we staid ten days, waiting for a wind. On the 12th, looking into the harbour, I observed four or five different winds at the fame who had a fair wind on our couries time, and at fea fome merchant-men but before we could do fo, a contrary wind obliged us to return to Zante, which we left on the 14th along with which induced me to try to join them, another Venetian man of war; and this through caution, having received adwice that there were a number of piratical barks in the Morea, which reno feeing the leaft part of them. spected no flag.

C 4

THE

tences, whatever ship they can; and THE coast of Greece and of Barbary is very dangerous for a fmall veffel, fuch as ours was, to cast anchor near: these barbarians making it their livelihood to rob, under different preon these excursions I have heard that their priests sometimes go with them. along-fide, and jumping, fword in or by fuddenly and fwiftly coming They seize on their prey by stratagem, hand, on board.

On the 15th we came to an anchor we left the ship of war, which staid at the island of Prodano in Morea: here to take in water; and taking a paffport a fair wind, which quickly brought from fignior Molin, we set sail with us to the first island in the Archipelago; formerly it was called Cytherea, which fignifies Venus, now it is named Adventumque tuum; tibi suaves dædala tellus Pacatumque nitet, diffuso lumine, cœlum. LUCRETIUS. Te, Dea, te fugiunt venti, te nubila celi, Summittit flores; tibi rident æquora ponti, O goddess! the winds and clouds fly at your approach; for you, the earth prepares its flowers; for you, smile the waters of the sea; and the serene fky shines with light diffused.

[25]

Cerigo But the wind there blowing directly in our teeth, we were forced to flop again for two days, about twelve miles to difagreeable occurrences. Quitting from the fortifications, much exposed Cerigo on the 19th, we had a tedious Andros, Sira, Tinos, and the rest of calm, and very great heat, for four days, rolling about off Zea, Fermio, these islands, without being able to set a fine prospect; but as the greatest foot on either of them. They form part of the islands in the Archipelago are barren rocks, it does not appear probable that they ever were very po-

THE island of Bacchus, called Navos, is the most fertile of any of them. In the channel of Zea a large piratical bark kept close to us a whole day, from fun-rife to fun-fet, on board which were thirty men and two cannon; they came out on purpose to plunder us, conceiting, I suppose, that an Englishman is always furrounded execution; for they faw, that if they with gold; however, after looking at them the worst reception in our power, one another the whole day long, they did not attempt to put their defign into had, we could not but have given and we had with us feven guns and fome fmall arms.

nior Dominico Alebrandi. Here we staid till the 27th, and then set sail, but were immediately drove back on the opposite island of Miconi. In this place On the 24th we landed at Tinos, and lodged at the house of one who stiled himself an English conful, fig-that of the other islands, as that of those islands is different from the dress of the European ladies; their heads are adorned with lively coloured turreaches to their knees; they have white place the dress of the fair sex is particularly strange, and as different from bans; their garments are a short white shift, plaited before and behind, which linen drawers, and red, green, yellow, or blue flockings, witth various coloured flippers.

Purpureoque alte, furas vincire Cothurno.

tures, and beautiful complexions; they very engaging countenances, much like what we fee of them in THE Greek women have fine feahave out being well versed in the present have excelled in sculpture all other nations, as the Italians have in paint-Greek language. of of nings horist ing. The houses in these islands have very little furniture in them; they are not judge of the manners or converfation either of men or women, withtheir flatues. The Greeks certainly clean and neat, but a foreigner can-

July, coni, for we were lodged at the house we quitted this place on the fecond of of another strange Greek, who called himfelf also an English conful; he WE staid but a day or two at Miimagined he treated us with great distinction and delight; but his perfon and behaviour being equally coarse,

the Raise a med barre and against fuly, and found ourfelves next day under the beautiful island of Scio, which, amongst other places, is faid to have the harbour of St. Helena, about eight given birth to Homer. We flopped near miles from the city; but a violent plague raging there at that time, prevented night, the wind being against us: we our having the pleafure to go on fhore. We left it the day following, and returned again to the fame place at failed again next day, and paffed by the city, which from its beautiful environs appeared to be fituated in the ferved a great number of large covered barges full of people, who lived on the water to avoid being infected on Not being able to advance, we Ropped midft of a delightful garden. flore.

Ropped again at the end of the island, where we were obliged to fland flill called to us through a trumpet to fend given accordingly, and a breeze springtwo days longer. The 28th, at break of day, we discovered a Turkish galour boat on board them, which we liot, about half a mile from us; they complied with; the captain afked in a polite manner, in the Italian lanwhere we were bound; answer being ing up, we steered over to the island of Myteline, and were in some hopes of having at least a day or two of good pointed; for just as we reached Cape Sigri, not wanting an hundred yards to double it, we were driven back again. wind, but, as ufual, we were difapguage, from whence we came, about from one tack to the other for liot, about half by a strong north-wester, and reduced to our usual entertainment of beating three days: *

A

[32]

fuave eft. Luckerrus. Suave, mari magno, turbantibus æquora ventis, E terra magnum alterius spectare laborem; Non quia vexari quenquam est jucunda voluptas, Sed, quibus ipse malis careas, quia cernere acre we were board a sufwer

on fhore, to observe others on board of ship la-How agreeable it is, when we ourfelves are fafe bouring in the flormy ocean:

But because it is very agreeable to see those calamities from which we are exempt. Not that we take pleafure in their diffrefs:

At length, however, on the 13th we paffed by the city and caffle of Myte-

Source: Tot line so

[33]

fome of his works, which are carefully line. In this place was born a most nex a finall pattern which I took from excellent Greek poet, superior to Anacrean, of whose genius hereunder I anpreserved in the Vatican.

Oculos habes Junonis, ô Milete,
Manus Athenis,
Mamillas Veneris,
Et crura Thetidis.
Fælix qui te videt,
Ter fælix qui te audit,
Semideus qui ofculatur, Immortalis qui congreditur.

Thy breafts declare the Cyprian queen of love, And Thetis' limbs each graceful step betrays. Thy eyes befpeak the imperial wife of Jove, Minerva's fingers thy fair hand difplays,

6

Happy's the man on whom thy eye has hung. Thrice happy, fure, if heard thy heavenly

Great as an emperor who thy lips has prelsid, If he embraces, as the gods he's bleft.

WE faluted, with feven guns, the fair, we had no thoughts of feeing bashaw's ship, which immediately sent ship of the captain bashaw which lay there at anchor, with four galleys and fome galliots; they returned our falute, as we supposed, with one cannon, which they fired. The wind being those hectors again; but the wind shifting, and a storm of thunder and lightning, drove us, against our inline, within an hundred yards of the a lieutenant, who with thirty men, clinations, into the harbour of Myte-cloaths, forcibly entered our little fabre in hand, and the plague in his velfel,

[38]

- Mentis inops, ut quem furialis Erichto Impulit.

(which faying, " we had not obeyed the figtance, under fail, and could not come to anchor at Myteline." But " nal, which was for us to bring to, shaw." We replied, " we had no cate; that we were at a great difconceive it of any use or intent to these reasons scarce sufficed to provent fort of informations to communigive our captain; but on shewing him the bastinado which he threatened to the Grand Signior's firman to give informations to the and

(which however he made very light of) he did not put his menaces into execution; and upon the whole, their behaviour is so arbitrary to extort money on any pretence, that it is advifable for all Christian ships, who fail this way, to avoid, as much as possible, the fleet of the captain bashaw.

reached a part of the island of Tenedos, On the 17th, in the evening, we which is miferably fortified by the Turks, and is about two leagues distant from the shore of Troy.

Shede.

Nunc tantum finus, et statio male fida carinis; Est in conspectu Tenedos notissima famá Infula, dives opum Priami dum regno manebante Huc se provecti, deserto in littore condunt.

T 37]

Once blefs'd with wealth, whilft Priam held the An isle, in ancient time renown'd by fame, Lies full in view, and Tenedos the name; fway,

But now a broken, rough, and dangerous way; And hid their hofts within the winding shore. Thither their unfuspected course they bore,

THERE are only fixteen miles from danells; but the currents are so strong Tenedos to the first forts of the Darthat there is no fuch thing as making this fmall distance with a contrary tering these streights, for the north wind always prevails in that feafon. Grecian fleet whilft the fatal horse was The iffuing wind. The months of July and Au-Tenedos is faid to have screened the gust are the most unfavourable for enintroduced into Trey. D3 forth of the Trajan troops to give battle to the Grecian forces, is described with consummate energy by Virgil in the Enied.

[38]

Stant pavidæ in muris matres, oculifque fe-quuntur,

VIRGIL. Pulveream nubem, et fulgenteis ære catervas.

follow with their eyes the duffy cloud, and the The women full of fear standing against the walls, troops glittering with braffs. Awong the multitude of that divine poet's beautiful deferiptions, none exceeds that of the fate of Orpheus and Euridice; part of which only I here infert, though the whole is extremely fine.

Illa

Septem illum totos perhibent ex ordine menfes, Elet noctem, ramoque fedens miferabile carmen Mulcentem tigres, & agentem carmine quercus. Qualis populea morrens Philomela fub umbra Integrat, et mœshis lata loca questibus implet. Rupe sub aëria, deserti ad Strymonis undam, Ele quidem Seygia nabat jam frigida cymba: Observans, nido implumes detraxit; at alla Fleville, & gelidis hac evolvisse sub antris, Amissos queritur fætus, quos duqus arator,

THESE charming lines are thus miserably translated by Dryden.

The rocks were mov'd to pity with his moan: For fev'n continu'd months, if same fay true, The wretched fwain his forrows did renews By Strymon's freezing streams he sate alone, Her foul already was configurd to fate, And thiv ring in the leaky feuller fate.

U 4 Trees bent their heads to hear him fing his wrongs, Fierce tygers couch'd around, and loll'd their fawning tongues.

Whole nest some prying churl had found, and So, close in poplar shades, her children gone, The mother nightingale laments alone: thence,

But the fupplies the night with mournful ftrains, By stealth, convey'd th' unfeather'd innocence. And melancholy musick fills the plains. How much better is a plain prose confruction than fuch wretched verse?

The said Stanson authorities m. Euridice's cold corple floated in the Stygian bark; whilft Orpheus is reported to have wept feven long months, under a lofty rock near to the barren river Strymonis; and in frozen caves to have pour'd forth his forrows fo powerfully, that tigers were foftened, and trees removed, by his verfe, and grant converted and

The state of the total than the Thus hearted ploughman carries away unfledged from Thus the nightingale, under fome poplar shade, night, fitting on a branch; renews her wretched fong, and fills the neighbouring woods with grieves for her lost offspring, which the hardtheir nest; whilf she, poor bird, weeps all forrowful complaints.

[41]

On the morning of the 19th we endeavoured to purfue our courfe, bring to in fight of ancient Troy, which though the wind was full against us, as indeed it had almost constantly been; but in the evening were obliged to was finely fituated, the country round it being a most delightful plain to the Postquam res Asiæ, Priamique evertere gentem, Immeritam vifum fupers, ceciditque fuperbum Ilium, & omnis humo fumat Neptunia Troja:

Diverfa

Divorta exilia & defertas quentre terras Auguriis agimur divum.

The throne of Prism, and the Phrygiau flate; When Troy, tho' Neptune rais'd her bulwarks When heaven destroy'd, by too severe a fate, round,

The pride of Afra, smoat'd upon the ground; Call'd by the guiding omens of the gods. We feek in vacant regions new abodes,

Sorte tulit; Trojam incenfam & prolapsa wi-Hæc finis Priami fatorum, hic exitus illum stight of gaind

Pergama; tot quondam populis, terrifque, fuperbum

denten

Avulsumque humeris caput, & sine nomine Regnatorem Asiæ: jacet ingens littore truncus, corpus.

Thus Priam fell, and thar'd one common fate With Troy in after, and his ruin'd flate:

[43]

He, who the foeptre of all Ha fway'd, On the bleak shore now lies th' abandon'd king, Whom monarchs like domestic slaves obey'd, A headless carcale, and a nameless thing.

the Turks call all of us Giours, that is QUITTING this place, the next Jiaurchioi, which fignifies, inhabited by Christians. It is well known that ten miles, opposite a village called day we could advance no more than infidels.

-Furor vulgi, divos folos esse credentes, Quos ipfe colit. FROM hence we fet off again on the 2 rft, beating up against the tide to no purpose till the 29th, when we were obliged to return to Tenedor, where we quitted the Dutch ship, and embarked of the 30th passed the first castles of embarked on board a miserable vessel called a Volligue; and on the morning came to the fecond caftles, known by the names of Seffes and Abydes; of which place was Leander, who used The next day we to fwim from thence to Sessas to visit rough, and he near being drowned. Martial makes him addrefs the waves thus, " Parcite dum propero, mergite his mistres; one night the sea was very the Dardanells. dum redeo." AND here also it was, according to Xerxes began his bridge; over which, in feven days and as many nights, he marched 1700 foot, and carriages. 80,000 horse, exclusive of camels and Herodotus, carriages. I do not take the channel to be above three quarters of a mile wide, and on each fide are placed a great number of very large cannon, level with the water. WE went on shore to a Jew's house, flantinople, from whence it receives all dined, and returned on board again in the afternoon. We passed the streights, which are about eighteen miles long, and on account of the weather, found it expedient to put into a little village on the Afatic shore, where we staid three days; and embarking again, mora, from whence this sea takes its came quite near to the island of Marname; the Black Sea and the White being called the two breafts of Con-will blow, one or the other afford it its nourifliment; for let what wind continually fleets of ships, and plenty of provisions.

[44]

[45]

[94]

dofto, a city pleafantly fituated, distant were at in furkey. We lay at the On the 5th we cast anchor at Rbofrom the metropolis about fixty miles. The Turks are here more affable to frangers than in any other place we house of a Roman Catholic abbot, who treated us with great civility.

CONSIDERING the length of time had been on the water, and how flowly we had advanced, we thought it better to finish the remainder of our expedition by land; we therefore hired

a Turkish

[47]

lively scarlet cloth, and painted red and a Turkish coach, with several saddle out any feats in them; they are very gold ground intermixed; they get into them by the help of a ladder, which is afterwards fastened behind; and they have painted lattices instead of gay and pretty, being covered with a with flowers, painted on a filver and horses: these coaches are long, and green on the outfide, and embellished fomething shaped like a hearse, withglaffes or doors. THE road from Rhodofto is beautifrom thence to Pera by land, or to St. long and well built stone bridge; and ful; one passes to Selivria over a very Stepbano. In this flort journey we experienced there, we concluded it best to go first but the the extreme heat of the feafon, and after three days travel came to St. Stewhich is only five hours difplague having just broke out afresh and violent wind, we were forced to to some one of the islands in the neighbourhood: we took, for that purpofe, a boat called Piade, with four oars; but there being no possibility of going of the furge of the fea spend the night in a fort of cellar, or they were of the lowest fort, and half rather den of Turks, whose company pose we had so much need of; for far from inclining us to the redrunk, and lived in a most wretched tance from Constantinople; off on account bbano, manner. Happy were we when the day opened again.

[49]

Purpureas Aurora fores, & plena rofarum -Ecce! vigil rutilo patefecit ab ortu NAT LINE STATE STATE And the wind being fomewhat abated, the coaches of Constantinople, the canal we got into our piade, which is a long narrow boat. They are, in a manner, there being full of them, and they are not unlike a flice of a fcoop'd melon. WE had scarce got into the gulph, when the wind rifing, and the waves breaking violently into our boat, we were glad to difembark on the first illand we could reach. These islands are about fifteen miles distant from Constantinople, and are five in number; and as no Turks live there, the Greeks and Franks enjoy great liberty, and go there in the fummer to avoid the The Grecian beauties amuse themselves here with walking, dancing, and other entertainments.

E

Con-

were going, and lodged at a French WITH much difficulty we at last Rhodosto arrived; and on the 12th in gained the Prince's Island, where we merchant's: next day our veffel from rath's Seraglio, almost to Leander's. the morning we embarked in her again, and kept close to the coast of Tower: a propos to which I think Affa, near the gardens of Sultan Amu-

proper

[31]

proper to infert the following lines received from a friend in England. Whilft you, my Lord, thro' foreign countries

From Europe's follies, and from Europe's crimes, Feel warmer funs, and view the cyprefs grove, His verse perennial with th' unpitying stream; In fearch of health you cannot find at home: While now on Afea's flow'ry paths you stray, From Greece bewail her ancient genius fled, Where lavish nature paints the purple way, In nature's book, the volume of mankind; Of favours flighted and neglectful fwains, Where rolls the Hellespont its rapid wave, Her virgins captive, and her spirit dead: Glad to retreat a while to happier climes, Who in foft murmurs tenderly complains Nor yet less eager to improve your mind Of foft Mufaus erst the mournful theme, Fatal to love, Leander's watry grave; Sacred alone to Mahamet and love;

While, studious, you pursue th' instructive plan, Those works I turn, which, born in happier days, The rage of conquest and the pride of kings: Our manners foften, and transcend our praise. And fome vile fpot retains th' imperial name, That marks the littleness of mightiest things, And hush the fighs due to an absent friend; Me to the cloyster'd cell my fortunes doom, And fearch, directed by th' historic page, And sprightly converse of a common room, Whose lofty tow'rs rise but in empty fame, 'Till you return the heavy hours to fpend, For cities loft in all-devouring age, Thro' all the vast variety of man,

FROM Leander's Tower we cross'd over to the fuburb of Topbana, where, pared for our reception; from whose being met by our Janislary, we walked up the steep hill of Pera to a house prewindows windows we eagerly cast our eyes on Constantinople, that famous city, which for its curiofity and fituation exceeds every other in Europe; having employed three months and eight days to arrive there from Naples.

[53]

. 3. F

Safetice to the

REMARKS.

SECTION S The property of the state of th A CONTRACTOR CONTRACTOR

SITAMAS En ... Caramana the metal south and the second

REMARKS

HOUGH I cannot undertake to give any new or valuable finances, or customs of the Turks, it being impossible for a Christian so to who should have refided amongst one who was there scarce a year, yet And, first, I can affuredly affirm, that remarks on the city of Constantinople, the religion, laws, politics, trade, them for a long time, and much lefe I have fet down fome things which have occurred to me relative thereto. the plague there is not fo dangerous as

[56]

P G

7

0

>

व ल

0

₽0°±

4

E E

.=

1

90

£ 4

fections, as well as those that seem to fevers; befides mankind perish by fuch we imagine, nor do I look upon it more contagious than other epidemic various, invifible, and unknown inbe known and distinguished, that the difeases incident to peculiar countries should never hinder a person of sense from vifiting them, or refiding there.

they are paved, and though not so urbs, is one of the largest cities in the world, and is faid to contain feven or eight hundred thousand people, and would be still fuller of inhabitants if the government would admit it. It the streets are consequently the same; is built on very unequal ground; and CONSTANTINOPLE, with the fub-clean as those at the Hague, are not so mand fine prospects to the sea. There gay colours and the cleanest turbans: each person here is distinguished by his cloaths, and the variety of differhouses are built of wood and plaister; out, but are convenient and fometimes The they make no great appearance withvery rich within: most of them comare no carriages for the transportation of goods in this city; porters are the general vehicles made use of, except for most things come to the city from the timber and such like they use horses, and tie the boards on their backs; inhabitants are extremely clean and well dreffed, especially the Turks, dirty as those were in London. Black and White Seas by water.

[57]

[88]

ent shaped turbans denote the fittiations of the different wearers.

is very rich; they wear a piece of of the nofe, so that their eyes only are freets, and the boats and the canal are uncovered: they walk much about the THE women in the freet wear robes green, red, yellow, blue, which mussin on their head, as far as the eye, cover intirely their underdrefs, which and an other on their chins, to the top full of them.

a twifted flick in his hand, on a little THE streets in this city are free from carpet, at the corner of most of the fireets, who, together with his comdisturbance. There sits a Turk, with panions, lice of this city is, in many respects, panions, immediately affemble on any beyond that of any other. Provisions and very good. This proceeds from its being the duty of the grand vizir are always in great plenty, very cheap, himself, the first person in the empire tainly is the first subject on earth in eminence and power, to vifit, in the different parts of the city, the markets every month or oftener; at which occasion that is necessary. The poafter the Grand Signior, and who certime he is followed, at a distance, by his officers, whom he precedes, dreffed like a private man, enquires into the prices of things, and examines their and shops, which he does generally value: if he finds them bad, overrated,

immediately the offenders very severefure, then he affumes the magiffrate, calls to his attendants, and punishes rated, or deficient in weight or mealy, but seldom with death.

1 1007

cassoned by a certain disease we labour THERE are few physicians, fewer apothecaries, and no furgeons here; the inhabitants therefore, I suppose, know little of the horrid mischiefs ocunder in great cities. THE religion, laws, and customs of make them, in direct opposition to ours; they eat, write, fleep, and fit low, we high; their dead they carry out head, we feet, foremost; their the Turks are, as much as they can to each other, the Grand Signior fends cloaths are long, ours thort; they have they believe in predestination, we do not; our potentates fend embasfadors lieve in One God, we in the Trinity; bassadors rather create than remedy many wives and miffreffes allowed by wh --- s, we a multitude; they benone; they fay on this head, that emlaw, we only one; they have few difputes.

OUR foldiers implements of war are nistaries being drawn up before the fire arms, theirs the fabre, the bow, the arrow, and the lance. The Jareceive new inftructions, from count Banneval in the Christian manceuvres The Jaferaglio to alter, their exercife, and of fire arms, threw their mulkets difdainfully on the ground, and drawing their fabres, cried out, " thefe arms " have fufficed to conquer this empire, "and will fuffice to maintain it." THE Turks make great use of baths, we do not.

in opposition to our fashion, carries his regard to the imperial fucceffion has THE Grand Signior's fword-bearer, mafter's fword by the point: with us thers fucceed brothers; and this in possible, and a young emperor very fons fucceed fathers, with them broreason with it; a minority being imrare: this, however, has also its inconveniencies; for it has occasioned many revolutions and massacres. The brothers brothers of the reigning monarch are confined in the feraglio, treated like princes, and have women allowed them, though not fuch as are likely to have children.

make emperors as the Pratorian guard to a refulgent throne, who again has THE body of Janislaries is omnipotent; great numbers of persons being enrolled therein, who receive no pay, did at Rome; and have often called forth a prince from a chamber of tears at Constantinople; they make and unquickly changed the same for a fepulchre. THE attention of government is directed to keep the law and the foldiery now-a-days a revolt is not likely to happen, experience having proved the other, who is fure to put to death great numbers of his refractory friends, for defired by the Turks, especially by the cefsful, they grow infolent to a great at variance, for without they unite a fear of their mutability and rebellious deportment. War is not at prefent great men, who are always fure to fall a revolution can fearce take place; and folly of dethroning one man for anfacrifice; for if the Janisfaries are sucdegree; and if they are defeated, they defpond; and either way occation de-The following anecdote will ferve to shew fomething of their dispositions. After the death of Mahomet the fecond, struction to their leaders.

merly been vizir to fultan Amurath; the Janifaries made an infurrection, shaws, plundered the houses of others, politician; and to put a stop to sediand committed a variety of outrages. There lived in the city at that time an old bashaw, called Isaac, who had forextremely ignorant, and a very bad tion, thought proper to place fome one on the throne; he went therefore and put to death feveral vizirs and baand fetched forth young Corcud, brother of Bajazet, then absent, whom in place of his father, and diffributed great fums of money amongst the folthem return to their he caused to be proclaimed emperor, duty. Nevertheless, a short time afterhe was a very good-natured man, diery to make wards the Janifaries mutinled again, part faults, they came to the divan of the new fultan, and told him, " that " all that was past they had done by means for the fake of pillage, " but only to re-enablin the affairs * were no longer observed; that none " But the children of villagers and and under pretence of excusing their of the empire, the laws of which chizens were feen in military emof ployments; whereas, by ordination " ought to be filled up with those who " had reved in the troops, and grown a old in the exercites of war; all their " of the first Ottoman emperors, they " pretenfions, taid they, went no forther than to obtain, that hencefor-" ward the captains, colonels, lieute" nant-generals, and governors of pro-" vinces should be appointed from " their corps." The good old fool flanc having read their propolitions, reply'd part of the Grand Signior, " that their demands were very rea-" fonable; that henceforward regard " fhould be had to them; and that ing been so easily gratified and sent dilifkier, who is fovereign judge of " they might retire in peace." Havand cried out, "they would also have they directly returned again, " chosen from amongst them the Ca-" the army, and ought to be most pro-" foundly verfed in the law." The " dren, fuch an office 'ought to be " held by a perfon of wildom who has " fludied baffraw answered them, " My chilthe away,

" fludied the law; is there any one " amongst you who is capable of it ?" The Janisaries replied, " that there " was one of their comrades, called " Saroug Buchiuk, who knew pretty well how to read, and who did not write ill; that by fludy and application he might acquit himfelf very "well in the office." Which the bashaw having heard, said to them, " I am content with it, the Cadilifkier also shall be yours; remain in lent policy there is merchandize from parts very good, and almost as cheap as where it is made. The Grand Signior's fleet confifts of fifty or fixty ships of the line, befides galleys and other veffels.

THERE is faid to be an immense The Turkilb lent money is very good; they have gold, nople is a free port, from which excelfilver, and mixed metal. Conftantitreafure in the feraglio.

permission to see the inside of Santa WITH little difficulty I obtained a Sopbia, in which I observed nothing the convenience of the Greek emand well proportioned, but the rest of the building is very heavy. The way up to the galleries, where but by a circular afcent, made for very remarkable: the dome is extenwe were carried to, is not by steps, Santa Sopbia is not to perors to ride up to the galleries on horseback.

pe

[70]

be compared to two or three other of the capital mosques.

Ar the feast of the Great Biram fights in Europe; it confifts of the the Grand Signior goes to the mosque of Sultan Abmed. The cavalcade, vizirs, bathaws, grandees, and all the on this occation, is one of the finest in the city, who go to pay their respects to their emperor. They begin morning, and continue doing so till which issues forth from the seraglio principal civil and military persons to come out at four o'clock in the appears, a deep filence is observed. about nine. When the Grand Signior The Janisaries line the street from the palace to the mosque: they are without the Grand Signior and to the vizins any fort of arms; they fland with only: these return their salute. I their hands acrofs, and bow down to Why they had no arms? Arms! faid asked a captain of the Janislavies, mics: we govern our subjects with he, you infidel, they are for our enethe law.

grelia. There are a fort of Turks bufiness to procure them; and the THE number of black and white I have been told, amounts to near called Lasces, who make it their flaves brought yearly to Constantinople, casha, Abyspnia, Georgia, and Min-20,000; they pay a capitation tax, and are collected from Persia, Cir-F4 metans; from whence they are brought off for Egypt, where white flaves are towns and villages, and on a proper their parents. Many also are bred on purpose to be disposed of: those merchants, who, if they do not fell them as they like here, ship them scarce. Formerly the Greeks and Jews and Perha, generally go first to the were permitted to buy fuch flaves as professed the Christian faith; but by way is to bribe the principals of fmall absent at work, they enter them, and Many slaves also are purchased from that come from Georgia, Mingrelia, carry away all they can lay hands on. Crim, where they become Maboto Constantinople by Turkish slaveoccasion, when the flout men

[73]

Christians are forbid to purchase any the most express and rigorous proclamations of the prefent Grand Signior, apartments for white flaves, and in the vet embroidered, and in rich head finely in blue, black, or crimfon velflave at all, nor can it be done withflave market is in the middle of the city; it is a quadrangle furrounded with area below fit the black ones almost naked. The white female slaves, when they are thewn for fale, are dreffed dreffes; fome of them fetch a great favages they are well fed, well dreffed, riety of things; they live in good fa-They are by no means unhappy; from almost and well entertained; they learn vaout almost certain destruction. price, and are proud of it.

[*]

milies, and often become rich; and as to their being in a flate of flavery, many attuations in life are much more tians; one of these girls, were it posfo. The Turk inspire them with the fible to buy her, would not flay an utmost diffain and hatred of the Chrishour in a Christian's house.

THERE is also at Constantinople a giving a downy to the girl you take. This is performed before an iman, outon of marrying for a time. lawyers, and witnesses.

dily WITH regard to the beauty of the their faces, being hid. They cannot fair fex, it is impossible to judge of it, however fail of having the fame bodily accomplishments as other European nations; perhaps more, from the value they fet, and the care they take of them: the Turks faying, "the fire of hell can never burn a pretty a rarity, and must not be looked for now-a-days in the East, but rather in proportion and symmetry, with a proper colouring and expression in every expressible, the fruits of great genius A PERFECT beauty is every where and sciences abound. For an exact part, are not fufficient to make beauty perfect: this requires the excellencies those countries where literature, arts. of the mind; they are endless and inand a fine education.

[75]

THE

covered in an intrigue with a Turkish woman; whilf we permit them, in which they certainly do, who is difhis Alkoran, or be inclined to quit his THE good old Mussulman will not, however, for these advantages lay aside rance of other nations: and nothing joy them; but by all means away with that foolish pride the Turks in general thusiasts in their religion, they look spifable as dogs, hogs, and devils. pipe, his fofa, or his girl. Let him enare blown up with. They are enon those who differ from them as de-This is from want of travelling; for they are in the most deplorable ignocan be more abfurd and cruel than their putting a Christian to death, our cities, the fame chance in amours with ourfelves.

us it would be to defire to fee our neighbour's wife naked; so contrary IT is not the cuftom among the men; and it would be as improper to alk a Turk, how his wife did, as with Turks to speak to them of their woare their customs to ours. THE Turks in Europe are much more civilized than those in Asis, for they look as rough as lions, and are if you pass the canal to Scutari, there is great difference in their behaviour: ready to tear a Frank to pieces.

THE

[%]

THE Turkif music, shough exactly contrary to ours, is not difagrecable; it confifts mostly in unifons. There is a temple in Peru wherein is performed admit Christians therein, thinking it twice a week the dance of the Dervifes, which is one of the most extraordinary things I ever faw; they to charming themselves, that it will induce every one who is prefent at the ven or eight Dervices, with high caps, and a fort of long pettiesutes, which nairow at the top and very broad at the bottom, enter a large circle, and, after having bowed to their prefure to music, which at first plays utmost fident, begin to turn round in a mea-Towly, but increases by degrees to the performance to turn Mahometan.

[79]

utmost quickness, whilst the Dervices ner, and continue it for about twenty accelerate their motions in like manminutes.

THE Turkish language is very grand and expressive, much more so than the variety of tongues in the world is tionaries to learn it from; the greatest there are grammars and dicfpoken here. Greek;

SPECIMENS

Manage disconnects of the first the state of secondary they are dope in the men. ner, and continue & for about treaty

Sind of the Theory and County in the County of the County with the sample of the world is of cu lines.

SPECIMENS.

.

SPECIMENS

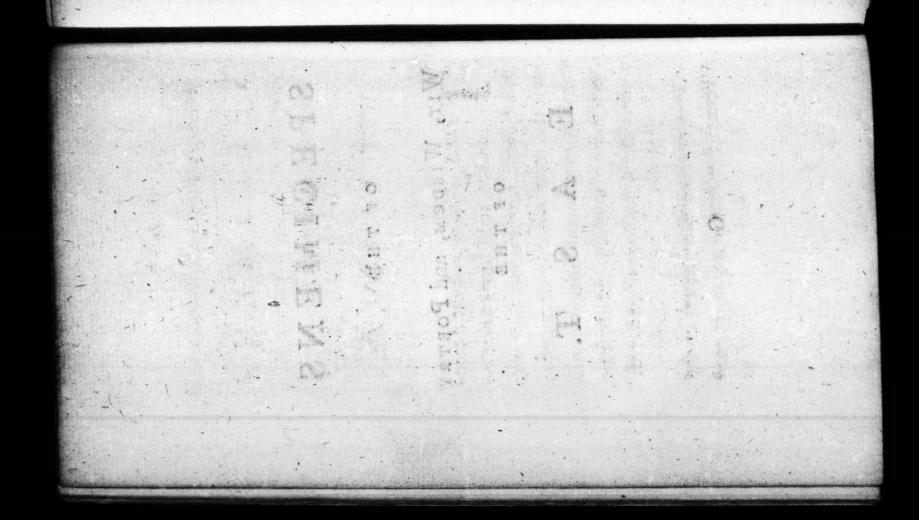

OF THE

WIT, WISDOM, and PORTRY

OF THE

E A S T.

.

SPECIMENS

OF THE

WIT, WISDOM, &c.

philosophers, that is to say, those who micians and Platonics fublime this is a magnificent title, but still much inferior to divine, which some WHE Arabians call the Acadehave the most elevated fentiments; of them merit, and have also received.

Alkoran is, "forgive eafily, do good The most excellent moraf in the et to all, and dispute not with the " ignorant." SUBLIME and mafferly is alfo this stops the deluge-" Earth fwallow " those thou hast poured forth. The commands of God were executed, passage in the same book, where God down thy waters; sky drink up " waters were immediately gone, the the ark rested on the mountain, and these words were heard, WOE "TO THE WICKED."

[84]

thousand thousand heads, in each of ven faw Azrafeel, an angel who had a MAHOMET in his journey to heawhich are a thousand thousand mouths, in each of those mouths a thousand thoufand thousand tongues, and in each of those whereby he confrantly celebrates the tongues a thousand thousand dialects, praifes of his most glorious and immense Creator.

each element fion. Round about this mighty being fnow, the other half fire: yet what In this heaven, as in the former, I finite God; in particular, here I saw a mighty angel whose composition was very furprizing, the one half being faw the stupendous works of an inits particular quality, being ftood almost an innumerable company of others of the fame composition; all incessantly crying, " Blessed be thy wholly free from mixture or confuis really aftonishing, G3 retained

[98]

" unite the most different things tor, who can with the greatest ease without confusion, in order to set " name, O mighty and infinite Creaforth thy immenfe glory."

brief to a fight of Paradife; the earth The DESCENDING from heaven Mabomet was conducted by the angel Gafeemed to him of pure filver, its gravel choice diamonds, its lofty hills fhining amber, its leffer mountains red hyaoinths, its buildings neatly fituated on the banks of that most excellent river Kuther. The throne of the Omnipotent is its covering, and prophets and many angels had here their refidence. Its cities were all its mercy its only medicine.

paved with pure gold, it palaces formed built of most precious stones, its vales lovely, and its herbs gave forth the and gates were extremely beautiful and most excellent and odoriferous fmells. Now, continued Mabomet, I went into feveral of these cities, and wheresoever I passed I met with odoriferous and filver, here and there charming finall rivulets flowed with the choicest The trees appearing of gold wine, honey, milk, and pure water, to which were fine shady trees, Bc. Bc. Bc. fcents.

THE author of Hakiac proves in his but himself, because his essence is so ledge of God is impossible to any other feparated commentaries that the perfect know-it fuffers no fort of determination of separated from all other beings, that names or properties. He is covered with the veil of his own excellence, jefty, and thereby guarded against all approaches of a conception and intellihid under the royal mantle of his mafore, fatigue your imagination and unprehend it, for elfe you labour in vain. gence of his creatures. Do not, therederstanding with endeavours to com-

Issa came to abolifh the law of Moses; Mabomet followed him, and introduced five prayers a-day; his followers fay, that, after him, no prophet is to be expected; and they thus ing to night. " Tell me, fince you uselelly occupy themselves from morn" live in one of these faiths, do you " enjoy more or less of the sun and moon? if you answer me imperti-" nently, I will raife my voice against shall continue to speak very low." The author of the Ejner El Tenzil racter of God, fince there is nothing you; but if you talk generoully, I amongst created beings from whence fays, it is impossible to give any chaparison which is adequate to him; can be taken any explication or com-"Lord, the weakness of my intelligence can form nothing of you, for "your essence can be only conceived " by your own effence itfelf."-The God's incomprehenfibility in thefe and, therefore, he cries out, "O author of Methnevi well describes lines:

[%]

fines: "To what purpose serve all " the efforts of human understanding to comprehend that being which tion. It is a tree which has neither on sehse can attach itself. It is a fuffers no combination or distinct roots nor branches, nor body wheretiddle in which neither natural nor " metaphorical fense can be found; " nor of which any explication can thoroughly fatisfy. It is infinitely above our capacities, and we lofe prehend it, or even to guess at what it is. It is therefore in vain, that always when we endeavour to comcourse thereon, and we ought to we feek for words worthy to difcontent durselves to adore it in respectuous filence.

ee WHEN

[44]

WHEN We endeavour to speak of " thee, O Lord, our difcourses conclude nothing. All the efforts which our understanding makes to comshall never arrive at a true know-" ledge of what you are. For every and every thing whereon we doubt " thing which we think for certain, " concerning you, is a mere nothing." " prehend you, end in nothing.

THE Christians err here and there in their opinions; the Mussulmen are intirely out of the way; the Jews are but mummies; and the Magi of Perha dreamers.

OMAR was so firmly perfuaded in the opinion of the fatal and inevitable term term of human life, that in his last " occation only to rub his ear with a sickness he said, "that should he have little oil to cure him, he would not " do it." " forethought is useless. When the meafure is full, numbers are no more WHEN destiny is against you, all wanted.

pends not on men; it is providence and THE success of human affairs dedivine decree decides all things. IT is God who opens, and God who

THERE is no refource against God, but with God himfelf.

WE

[93]

WE are only the bow, it is God directs the arrow. HE that afflicts himself for what quiet we take brings no fort of remedy may happen, does wrong; for should what we dread happen or not, the difor advantage.

" one day refemble this cavalier;" but his mother's breaft, and pronounced A WOMAN of Balfora carrying an valier of handfome mien, richly dreffthe infant immediately turned from " ver fuffer me to refemble this man." infant in her arms faw pafs by a caed, and well mounted, and cried out, " I wish to God that my child may diffinctly these words, "O Lord, ne-

Hie

The mother, more aftospeak, not long after observed pass by to God that the like treatment might His mother, aftenified to hear him her a criminal whom they punished with stripes; and she said, " Lord, " defend my child from fuch treat-"ment;" but at these words the infant turned again from her, and prayed nished than before, asked it, why it spoke thus? and the child faid; " the reason is, that the cavalier is a wick-" ed man, and the criminal an innocent person, who araids all his sufferings says, Lam content; God fuffices me, and will account with " me for what I endure: for this man has obtained, by his patience and refignation to the will of the Albefal him.

[95]

" mighty, a most eminent degree of e merit, to which I hope one day to " arrive."

detate, exercife amongse yourselves just fervants, and when I am dead he will fend you another, who will execute his orders with more rigour. Do you tice, and be obedient to his commands; confider that your behaviour is the principle and cause of the good dection of the thing you prefent to it. In the manner you live you will always be ill used, for God has many defire the prince to be foft and moor bad treatment you will receive. A prince may be compared to a lookingglafs, what you fee therein is but a re-

X

My heart has various times turned itself from right to left, but at last has quitted all other beauties to attach itfelf to you only.

pointed the emir Ali to command his armies; this general, whilf he changing his cloaths, he found a fcor-NASSER BEHN AHMED having apmace; and after he had received his was receiving his orders, felt a pain, which occafioned him to make a griorders, and was retired home, on pion which had stung him in several pened to the emir, faid to him, the first time he saw him after he was cured, e that NASSER, hearing what had hap-

" an animal even before him." The emir nobly replied, " how should he who cannot fuffer in your prefence " that he did wrong not to have de-" livered himfelf from fo venemous the sting of a scorpion, be able, when absent from you, to endure the points of arrows, and the cuts of fabres, for your fervice." A PRINCE having afked his physi-" how much daily food was required to support the body and keep up its firength;" the physician repable of supporting him, and should "that one pound was enough, fuch a measure being very well cahe take more, he must support it."

H

THE

THE man really noble is generally he who is of low and base extraction modest and reserved; on the contrary, is most often rash and impudent. A wise and prudent man fwallows his grief, and waits for the occafion.

THE excellence of a man does not confift in a pretty face; the qualities of the mind are the fund of that beauaccording to the fages. Four things should never slatter us; familiarity with princes, the careffes nor a warm day in winter; for these of women, the fmiles of our enemies, things are not of a long duration.

YOUR

is to happen, and the contingency of Your own reason is an error, thereopinions is the way to err; for fince you can never reafon but upon what fore it cannot discern an error; to slick firmly to one's own fentiments and things, all your thoughts and reasonings will conduct you into the darkness of pride and obstinacy. THE worst of princes is he of whom the good fear and the bad hope; it is very difficult however to diffinguish the bad from the good ultimately. Ir an ignorant perfon perceives in himfelf one virtue, he thinks he has a hundred; and if he has otherways a thousand faults, he sees none of them;

H W

pnq

[001]

excellent perfon, he imagines he has a but when he observes one defect in an thousand. HE alone is worthy the effeen of mankind, who has a beautiful foul like a diamond obscured by no speck. Do not ferve that which understands not, nor fees not, nor what brings you no profit: it is aftonishing that men forget to alk of him who is rich, and they endeavour to be affifted by those who are themselves under a necessity of this world pay their court to creatures and forfake their Creator; of begging.

HE that thinks to content his defires of what he wishes by the possession for

for, is like him who puts out fire with

You cannot draw a line but it must have a beginning and an end; a wife man knows, first, the principle and origin of all things; and, fecondly, is not ignorant of their end.

the earth turn round the As long as old age shall succeed to fun, be old in council and young in fortune, fo that both old and young may feek to ferve you. youth, and

THE Mahometans esteem fools, saints; wifdom is looked upon as folly by people of this world, which very wifand they add, with more fenfe, dom confifts in folly.

H 3

SOME

[162]

Some things may be compared to the eye which appears black, but is, when examined, a body of light. You have spoke well to-day, but have you thought on what you are to do to-morrow. You ridicule me because you know what I do; did I know your actions I could return it. HAPPY are those who know us not, as well as those we do not know; for if we know any one, it ferves him only to prolong his labours and interrupt his fleep.

mies as to make them our friends, LET us behave so well to our ene[103] ner as to attach them invariably to our and carefs our friends in fuch a manintereft.

partakers of them; but the avaricious Wise men use liberally their estates, and during their life make their friends are so foolish, that they amass riches even for their enemies. To obtain knowledge you should have the vigilance of a crow, the greediness of a hog, the careffes of a cat, and the patience of a dog. THE most excellent of all virtues is purity of intention. Justice for an hour is better than devotion for a year.

H 4

WHAT-

[104]

WHATEVER Knowledge I may have above others is, that I have a long time confidered and studied my own ignorance, 4

THE fire of hell can never burn a pretty face. THERE is no difease so incurable as inveterate ignorance. NEITHER good or bad in this world laft long. HAPPINESS is the lot of knowledge, mifery the inheritance of ignorance,

.0

P

+

THE multitude live in ignorance.

THE bigger the head to the greater infirmity it is exposed.

U

THE

[ros]

THE time you employ to ill is carvicifitudes of the world, without its ried away by the wind of the common ever being again retrievable.

and strength to do good; for without I PRAY to God to give me grace that what good can ever proceed from me which ever way I look or act? Some are for method, fome for ex-

MEN know not the qualities of what they fearch after, and therefore they do not attain it.

PRESENTS are the cords and machines which give motion to affairs. CONSIDER

[you]

CONSIDER the caducity of this world.

FEAR God and be ashamed of man-

To-DAY council, to-morrow treason,

C

a

N A

his condition, is like those who put vermilion on their cheeks whilft an A MAN who dreffes himfelf beyond ulcer devours them, DRESS is more proper for the ladies than for men of courage,

15

15

9.

THE fruit of abstinence from the affairs of this world is peace of mind.

an

4

WHEN

[101]

WHEN the mind is tired, and you use it like the falt on your meat, feek to relieve it by fome divertion, fparingly.

EXPECT no pity from this faithlefs any one; if you are fometimes dazzled cruel world, it never yet gave any to with its brilliance, think it will foon finish and fade away, is put, like a fword in a fcabbard; it is the fword you should value, not the THE body is a cafe wherein the foul scabbard.

that, and your defires from the affairs of I DESIRE you to restrain your hands this world, and when you have done that, it is of little fignification whether your fleeves are long or flort.

[108]

WE featch after three things in this but he who lives retired from the world, honour, riches, and pleafure, tented with what he has is rich; he who despifes the world, and occupies world gains honour; he who is connot him felf with it, has found repofe,

- 74

THE gain of all things which subfift noise and diffurbance: fly; and make in this world do nothing but make a your retreat in the domain of Chass, there you will meet with repofe.

0 =

T

0

七

:3

Suppose you possessed every thing will it not that is great in this world, [601]

one day, all vanish? and that fatal day does it not incessantly repeat to you, that dirt and dust is your only fund and your last habitation?

is the awakement; and the dreams of THE life of this world is only a sleep, of which the life of the other this fleep are nothing but confusion.

lid a foundation, the majefty of God EVERY thing which wit, wildom, or imagination can build on ever fo fothrows down and flrikes to atoms at one blow.

pared HE will catch the wicked when they do not expect it; they shall have time nevertheless, but the ambush prepared for them is very flrong; that is to fay, inevitable.

[110]

THE accomplishment of God's promifes does not depend on your defires; but whoever does hurt shall be punished.

=

ロロ

是 是

HALEB AL NAGAR being alked, what was the most excellent thing Senfe." But if he has none, what is the best "thing he can have?" "Honefty," replied Haleb. "And if he has not that?" -- " The counfel of his And when he cannot have either of friends," replied the doctor. " And in want of that ?" -- " Taciturnity." these things?-" A sudden death as in man?" he replied, " foon as possible."

5

99

99

33

He

. 99

99

[1111]

HE pulled from his pocket a piece fame with so much address that he tily. After which, caufing another of to the musicians, he accompanied the his pieces to be performed, he made of music, which having distributed ing the music a third time, he laid made the whole company laugh hearthem weep. And then again, changthem fast asleep.

" not be too forward to give me your " advice in private; in general, stay teach me not in publick, and do till I ask you, and be satisfied in out adding any thing superfluous: THE khaliff Al Mamon spoke thus to the celebrated doctor Asmaabir; " giving me a precise answer, withtake care, above all other things, or not to pre-occupy my thoughts in order to gain my confidence and " authority: do not expatiate too when you observe that I deviate " me back again foftly, without ufing much on histories and traditions, from equity in my judgment, draw teach me principally things which courses in the mosques and other without I give you permission: disagreeable words or reprimands: are necessary for my public difplaces: do not speak to me in obfcure mysterious terms, nor use far-TOTAL ROLL fetched expressions."

BABAGAN was a great prince; but what furpaffed the number of his victories,

9

+

[stic]

tories, and the magnificence of the cities he built, was the defign he had prizes and his conquefts, his particular actions, and even difcourfe, should have been wrote down without difguife. He so much hated flattery, that one of his courtiers, by his orders, questioned him every morning on the things he had faid and done the to keep a journal, in which his enterday before.

precious drefs you can wear is a robe. others to adorn you; but the most of modefly and innocence. This habit is not of filk or fatin, but of that I HAVE prefented you with many robes, fome to keep you warm, and some to defend you from the weather, commendable stuff which regards the foul and fenfes. that inhabits this palace is the king of men and monarch of the earth. which cannot be found in any other of THERE is a treasure in this house it to that treafure; for, in a word, he created beings; and this house, beautiful and magnificent as it is, is nevertheless worth nothing if you compare

.

-moo

[rit]

A KHALIFF, visiting his treasures tern of gold and filver, and faid to with one of his courtiers, found a cifhim, "God grant that I may live ". long enough to employ this money." The courtier hearing these words fmiled; and the khaliff asking him the reafon

4

5

-

[115]

fason thereof, he replied, " I remem-" ment that has excited my fmiles; "wanting fix feet to fill the ciftern; " and he faid, would to God I might " live to finish the filling it up. It is "therefore this difference of fenti-"when I confidered, that Abdula thought of nothing but fillingber, my lord, that accompanying your predecessor the khalist Naser "Abdula to this place, there was you, Sir, but of emptying it." THE magnificence of the court of but Mabomet is an ocean which has neither bottom nor shore. I found mydeep, without fifting up one pearl, self in this ocean, and dived in the [su]

but it is not the fault of the ocean, but the effect of my ill luck.

ALEXANDER being afked, why he father? faid, " My father brought me honoured his mafter more than his " down from heaven to earth; but " my mafter made me re-afcend from e earth to heaven again."

THOSE A COME

HALLADGE having faid one day to Abubekre, " Believe in me, and I will give you a plant whose seeds shall " be of copper which will change in-" to gold." Abubetre answered him, " Believe in me, I will fend you an " elephant laying down on its back, "whose feet shall reach the skies;

[417]

" and when I choose it shall disapfe pear, I will hide it in your eye. THE greatness of the palace answers to the power of him who inhabits it; the same as every nest is in proportion to its bird. 101 do 10

I HAVE cleaned my mirror, and fixing my eyes on it, I perceived to many defects in my person that I casily forget those of others. LOS S. S.

A ROUGH from of Golconda becomes diamond when the fun undertakes to purify it.

Ir you have patience you will fee, thofe reduced to duft and trodden under foot,

Today of Sand Man or City

[118]

those who have oppressed and trodden behold bloffom like fo many rofes those who in this world were looked upon others; and in the end you will upon as thorns. You will fearch for in vain two the first is a wife man who is pious; for as foon as you find piety, rance: the fecond thing you will in more find this than the other, is it not vain look for, is a fincere and a confince then you can no there also will you meet with ignobetter to live in retirement? fant friend: things, then THIS world is a field wherein we day you will reap to-morrow. Labour fow for the other; what you fow to-that you may not have the pain to reap then to fow fuch good feed to-day, none but bad to-morrow. THERE is a river in paradife whose banks are of pure gold, the pebbles whereon it flows are pearls and rubies; its fand is more odoriferous than musk; milk; its foam more brilliant than the stars: he who drinks thereof is never its water fweeter and whiter than thirsty again.

[416]

POET, addressing himself to the wind paffing by his door in its way to his mistress, says, compence, if, in the moment when " trefs's " You shall have my life for a reyou blow by the door of my mif-

[120]

" who, proffed with extreme defire to " trefs's habitation, you repeat to her "these words; I beheld at the cor-" ner of the ftreet a desponding lover, fee you, is at the point of death."

THE same poet says, in another thousand languishing moments of place, " Extreme was the pleafure "which I felt on hearing your foot-" fleps, ardent as I was to see the only object of my wifhes, after a " faint hopes.

" By the tears in my eyes, and by " wherewith I am made confumes in " flames and diffolves in water at the " the wound in my heart, the clay fame time.

[121]

of AT your approach which charms " my heart, I faid, it is the zephyr " flowers, or heaven has burnt aloes " odour, after having paffed over fields full of a thousand sweet-scented " which brings with it so sweet an " wood in the flames of the fun.

" I SAID a thousand times to my inflamed heart, that it should throw water on the fire which confumes it, but it listens not to my advice, and exposeth itself continually to the wind which fans the flame; a thou-" fand amorous disquietudes will re-"duce it at last to dust." THESE roses are like the cheek of a modest young lady, when her lover approaches to falute her.

WHEN

studies, he wrote on his ink-stand; WHEN Amin Ben Haroun was young, the khaliff his father urging him to his " I am thinking of my amours; find " fome other who will fludy."

This was ed by the khaliff for not keeping her THE promises of night are given said by an Arabian beauty, of as much wit as wildom, on her being reproachmorning appointment with him, as she "to bring on the day." had promifed. YE that have feen the greatness of Alp Arflan lifted to the skies, come to Meru, and ye will see him buried in the duft,

THE

[123]

THE following beautiful elegy was composed by the Persian poet Asmak, on the death of a princefs.

begins to blow in the gardens, that " AT the time when the fresh rose which was already open fades in an instant, and falls to dust; and whilst this narciffus has dried up, for want the bloffoms of the trees fuck up the moisture of the spring clouds, of water, amidst the freshness of a garden."

thoughts of a poem called Hadaic Al THE khaliff having afked Afmak his by the poet Raschid, Asmak told the the fultan the poetry was good, but Seber (the inchanted garden) written Wanted wanted falt. The fultan, for amuseing publickly declared this judgment, Raschid, whose wit was penetrating and ready, was not long in thought ment between these two poets, havere he gave this reply in verse: " Afmak accuses my verses of want have no more flavour than the most " of falt; and I think he has reafon, gar and honey, which do not agree for I have feafoned them with fu-" with falt; but for his verfes, which " infipid roots, they have no great oc-" cafron thereof."

[124]

The state of the s

4

JOURNEY BY LAND

F R O M

CONSTANTINOPLE, &c.

...

[127]

JOURNEY by LAND PROM

RIA, MOLDAVIA, POLAND, and MELIA WALLACHIA, BULGA-Constantinople, through Ro-GERMANY, to ENGLAND,

IN THE YEAR 1764.

WE fet out from the fuburbs of Pera on the morning of the 22d day of May 1764. Our equipage confifted of two coaches, one after the shion, with two large waggons to Turkifo and one after the Frank carry the necessary baggage, and twenour way over the church-yards which lie above Pera, and bending to the right hand, left the city of Constantipassed through deveral fine meadow grounds, in which were many hundreds of most beautiful horses belonging particularly to the Grand Signior. We observed, with surprize, that each horse was fastened by the leg with a cord to a stump in the ground, so as nevertheless to be at liberty to graze around at a distance, Most of them were in cloaths, and each of them had feparate attendants, who at night spread small carpets on the ground for them to repose on. About noon we nople in the valley on the other. ty-four perfons in number.

[128]

-

quently refides on account of the fweet were at a place called Dauthafeba, where the prefent Grand Signior frewaters whereon his palace here is built. About four o'clock we arrived at a fmall town called Pontipiccola. suspicions, on account of its being the In this place the Turks are extremely last guard of Constantinople. It was necessary to furnish ourselves here with a ticket from the cuftom-house officer. From thence we passed over a large bridge, and fpent the night in a village called Cowmifiez. On the 23d we paffed through Silivria, Chienclia, and lay that night at Churhulu.

[130]

On the 24th we went through a called Chielistrian, and from thence to Bourgas, where we lodged in a large and commodious chann. The entrance was through a grand stone portal into a spacious quadrangle, bigger than the Royal Exchange, with a large fountain in the middle. On each fide were apartments, without and the other for the men. From this holding 5000 horfes. It is all built the whole being covered with sheet lead. It must have cost a great sum of furniture; one fide for the women, quadrangle iffued stables capable of of free-stone, and regular masonry; money, and was built out of vanity and devotion by a vizir. The Turks esteem it an act of piety, as indeed it village is, to build inns for the free reception of travellers. On the 25th in the evening we arrived at Kirkliffee, where we lay; and went to Chanara, on the 26th we went to Chanara, where we faw the Bulgarian women, who adorn their head and their breafts were informed here that the roads were not fafe; and, in fact, a mulket with little pieces of filver called paras, shot had very near deprived us of one and other fuch-like trinkets. of our drivers.

[131]

tars that speak a sort of Sclavonian fcription THE Bulgarians are Scytbian Tar-They eat raw horse flesh, and put me in mind of the horrid delanguage.

[r3z]

scription Juvenal gives of the Antbrapopbagi in his fifteenth fatire.

Occidisse aliquem; sed pectora, bracchia, vultus, Vel quo non fugeret, si nunc hæc monstra Quid diceret ergo, Aspicimus populos, quorum non sufficit iræ Crediderint genus esse cibi. videret

Tanquam homine, et ventri indulfit non omne Pythagoras? cunctis animalibus abstinuit qui legumen.

We see people who are not contented in their anger only to kill any one, but they confider Pythagoras should see these monsters, what would he fay, or where would he not fly to? he who abstained from eating all forts of flesh, as if it was a man's; and did not even indulge their breafts, arms, and face as good food. himfelf with every herb.

+

THEY

[133]

ental Scytbians, who inhabit the banks THEY came originally from the oriof the other fide the river Volga to the north of the Cafpian Sea. They are Christians, and said to have adopted that religion from the discourse and miracles of certain bishops, whom these barbarians, in their incursions into the Roman empire, had taken prisoners. The description which more northern parts, up the nook of thren the Hunns, who inhabited the Claudian gave formerly of their brethe Caspian Sea, suits them very well to this day.

Transgelidum Tanaim, quo non deformius ullum Est genus, extremos Scythiæ vergentis in ortus Arctus alit; turpes habitus, obscenaque visu Corpora; mens duro nunquam cessura labori.

3

[r34]

Ludus, et occifos pulchrum jurare parentes. - frontemque fecari Præda cibus -

Their other side the cold streams of the Tanais, up drefs is wretched, their bodies difgustful to the fight, and incessantly employed in hard work; The northern parts of the globe do not produce a more deformed race of men-than those on the they live by plunder, and divert themfelves in cutting their foreheads; and they delight in to the farthermost parts of Scythia. fwearing at their flain parents.

SOME confound the Moldavians and Wallachians together; they are indeed sprung from the same origin, called Tomi; which he deplores in his Epistles and Tristibus, written from nished to this province into a city THE famous poet, Ovid, was ba[135] the Pontus Euwinus. He represents far from hence, on the confines of where he was obliged to keep close the inhabitants as covered with beafts skins, and characterizes them by the " taque turba Getarum." He describes for fear of the Barbarians, who used This excellent poet died not breeches they then wore; "Bracca-Tomi as a town fortified with walls, ing froze over to plunder the opposite Hungary, in Sabaria, where is found to take advantage of the Danube's bethis epitaph. fhore.

Ovid. Nason. epitaph, Sabariæ.

Sæpe miser voluit patriis occumbere terris, Sed frustra! hie, illi fata dedere locum. Hic jacet ille vates, divi qui Cæfaris irâ Augusti, patria cedere jussus humo.

[136]

THOSE, however, who can write an epitaph, or an elegy, like Ovid, want neither to make them immortal. How sweetly he deplores the death of Tri-

Ecce Puer Veneris fert everfamque pharetram, Ah, nimis ex yero nunc tibi nomen erit. Pectoraque infesta tundat aperta manu. Ille tui vates operis, tua fama, Tibullus, Ardet in extructo corpus inane rogo. Flebilis indignos, elegia, folve capillos, Et fractos arcus, & fine luce facem. Aspice, demiss ut eat miserabilis alis, O weeping elegy! Iet loose your indignant locks: Tibullus, your poet, your glory, burns a lifelefs See, the fon of Venus carries his quiver reverfed, his bow broken, and his torch extinguished. alas! too truly will you now be called fo. body on the funeral pile.

Look.

[137]

Look, how he walks miferable with drooping wings, and beats his naked breaft with his cruel hand. On the 27th we met with a Moldavian prince, who was deposed, and great number of coaches filled with returning to Constantinople, with a his attendants, and many Moldavians here, and to the banks of the Danube, gling parties of libertine Crim Tartars, tle caravan, well mounted, and armed cuftom to do, they being remarkably two parties of whom paffed by our lit-&c. &c. and we were very fortunate that they did not seize us, as it is their the woods are full of thieves and stragwith lances, bows, and arrows, &c. civil and honest to strangers at home, on horse and foot to guard them;

but abroad the greatest villains and thieves imaginable. So much are they so, that a very little while before we paffed through Moldavia, they had plundered great part of it, carrying away men, women, children, cattle, and whatever they could lay hands on; Grand Signior, who does not think it adviseable to chastise them for it; but and this they do, notwithstanding they are intimate friends and allies of the partly by threats and partly by prefents perfuades them to defift.

missioner, who was going to advance WE were advifed by this prince to the new prince; and we accordingly did so that evening. On the 28th we departed join ourselves with the Capegi or com-

[139]

now-a-days by the Turks. We fet out extending themfelves first from east to west, take afterwards another direction from north to fouth, which feparates part of Thrace from the Sardian terdeparted in his company, who had with him a fuite of thirty-fix Turkish horse; which is a pretty Greek village at the foot of the Great Balcan, as it is called early from thence in the morning to Great Balcan, formerly called Hamus, is a chain of mountains which rife to a great height one upon another, and nut, and came in the evening to Ides, and thus we passed through Charabouget over it if possible in one day. ritory of Dacia.

Mayors, nubifero seu tu procumbis in Hæmo, -Sic ante tubas, aciemque precatus

[140]

Seu tu cana gelu Rhodope, seu remige Medo Sollicitaris Athos, seu te caligantia nigris Ilicibus Pangæa tenent, accingere mecum Et Thracas defende tuos.

CLAUDIAN.

Thus, O Mars! you are invoked before the army with found of trumpets. Whether you repose on cloudy mount Hemus, or whether you are folicitated on Rhodope, hoary with frost, or on Athos with the rowing Mede; or whether the Pangaan hills, darkened with black oaks, retain you, advance with me and defend your THE afcents over these mountains. are very steep, and lie in the midst track is in as bad condition as can be of great woods; the road or rather conceived; one high hill is no fooner furmounted but you descend rapidly into a deep valley, full of rocks, mud, and water. I was informed that I should have a view of the Adriatic and Euxine seas at once, but suppose we did not rise flruck with the immenfity of space high enough; though I was and profpect around us. WE suffered a deal of fatigue, and spirits which, together with ourfelves, was our baggage, often preserved by the strength and much difficulty we avoided paffing the night in this deferted Scytbian wildercare of our attendants. It was with ness; but the presence of the Capegi, who here joined us again, gave fresh were near lofing all spirits to our men, so that we kept up with his fuite, whose custom it is to keep a constant firing into the woods as they pass along, to drive from thence the thieves and villains who lurk there.

[141]

[142]

WE croffed a river more than fixty times, which meander'd through the trees, which rendered the passage very the evening we got out of this place dangerous and rough; but towards on a cultivated plain; and came to a Bulgarian village called Kupri Kioi. Here we found houses built in the shape of fugar loaves, white washed within, and thatched with flraw; their infide is very miferable, without furwood betwixt stones and stumps niture,

women feemed made of mud more niture, chimneys, or windows. The than flesh; and they were as stupid as no vated, and arrived at a village called Collegia; from whence we departed next morning, and got to Hagi Oglou Bazarith with great difficulty, on acthe 30th still over plains poorly culti-We fet out from hence count of the badnefs of the roads.

plains, the evening came to Cievin, where we found a tolerable lodging. In our Turks have the reputation of being for We quitted it on the second, and in On the first of June we lay in the village of Convada, in which place the most part thieves and robbers. road next day we faw vast uncultivated plains, and at a distance discovered a Greek village Jegni Koy. On the fourth we went on, and at fun-fet the Danube, and spent the night in passed the Danube in two large boats, which carried over the horses and carriages. We rested a day in Jalatz, which stands on the banks of the river in Wallachia.

On the fixth we continued our journey through vast uncultivated plains, which have an excellent foil, the grafs being above two feet high on them as country is infelted with innumerable flights of locusts from Tartary, which prising manner. The following eveneat up every fort of herbage in a furfar as the village of Putsen.

[]

they are naturally very good, and might ing we got to Birlatt, and on the and the lands uncultivated; though 8th to Gaffovi, both miferable places, be tilled to great advantage. On the eighth we paffed through made the roads so bad, that we did not immense woods; continual rains had without much labour get out of them found we were near Jaff, the capital of Moldavia, but which we could not enter till day-break, because of the till midnight; and towards morning streets of Jass are boarded with deal boards, like our floors; the houses are all on one flory, low and mideep mud which furrounds it.

ferable, and very little better than in one of these huts, having put up a small mattress bed to lie down on, just 4 in the fcattered villages we had from time to time fet up at on our journey; large cow, which was on the outfide pole, eat off the straw covering of the they are built of earth, except a few belonging to the principal Spodars: my hovel, wanting provender I suproof, run her head through it, and through the top of my bed; this, together with the innumerable fwarms me to fit up all night, as I did indeed of vermin all over the place, obliged as I was closing my eyes to fleep, almost all the journey.

[147]

leffer conventals of St. Antonio Di WE lodged at a convent of the Padua, where we were tolerably well commodations for two days. After fupper the discourse falling on poetry, I said, "that there had been in Eng-" land most excellent poets." But they laughed heartily at my information, faying, " that the English lan-" guage was fo uncouth, that it was entirely improper for poetry." These or London in England?" friars spoke Greek, Latin, and Italian; but asked me, "whether England was and indeed feemed to care nothing furnished with provisions and in London, about it.

19

THE

[448]

nished us with a guide and a string of THE agent of the prince having furwild horses, on the 3d we departed, and in the fame evening arrived at Tabor, a village as miserable as the reft. The morning of the 13th we the night; and at day-break the next again, as we approached the frontiers the Turkilb villages increased; and in got to Stoephanest, where we passed morning crossed the giver Pruth, on a wretched raft, with much danger and difficulty. Getting into our road the evening we came to the last fort-ress in Turkey, on this side called Chocim, where we croffed the river Kniminions from Poland.

[re49]

fee the church fleeples, and hear the found of their bells again, which are As foon as ever you are out of the ferry-boat, wherein you crofs the Kniefter you are immediately in Swanic z; and we were not ill pleafed to allowed in the Turkish empire. efter treat the Christians with kicks and thumps like dogs; and would knock should dare to fay, our Janislaries had passed to the Polish er Brother, you are now within the found of bells, we must behave The Turks on their fide the river Kni-"God blefs you, Sir;" but as foon as fide with us, one faid to the other, otherwise than we do in our own who "country." down there. We were entertained by the commandant with great politeness. I fituated; and the complexions both with me in Latin, but had little more of men and women as fine as can be The Polish commandant waited on us, and discoursed some time THE town of Swanietz is pleafantly fense than a ploughman. He gave us ress of Kaminieck, which is one of the It has only one door into it, and is were 10,000 men in it when we were flrongest by nature that I ever saw. The ditch that furrounds it is two foldiers as an efcort to the fortfituated on rocks which are its ramextremely broad and deep. There had almost forgot to mention, that so nietz was prodigious: they came in at us, and I never faw fo grotesque rare is it for coaches to pass this way, crouds to the door of the house to look but this did not make them defift, that the curiofity of the people at Swamob; numbers of Jews, in long black gowns, being mixed with Archildren. The eagerness of women and much hurt, cried out miferably, menians, Polanders, men, women, and and feveral of them being squeezed being greater than that of the men, and were obliged to be carried home: and were the foremost to come up stairs; which, to satisfy them there for they came again the next day, was nothing to fee, we thought pro-11 110 012 per to admit of. On the 20th we left Kaminieck, and which is peopled by Jews, as indeed came in the evening to a caftle called tified town of Zamosch: We spent the city and fortress of Leopold. Af-Hushiatin, belonging to a nobleman of the fame name; and on the 26th we fet forward again, and lay that are almost all the Polish villages. About the middle of next day we came to tinued our journey, being the first night at Schierez, the second at Tunight in the village of Miconeetz, ter a stay there of a few days, we conmaschu, and the next day saw the forthe the night in the village Mechele. We. came next day to the citadel of Lublin; and on the following day we dethe muddy river Viftula, and lay at parted, and dined at a village called Polaco, where we saw a magnificent palace belonging to the prince Czartorinfki. We croffed in the afternoon Gnieversdorf. On the middle of next day we fet up at an inn about a league other very elegant palace belonging to distant from Warsaw, opposite to anthe fame prince.

L3

THE

[150]

[151]

L

Was

[152,]

[153]

that on one fide a horse is up to his belly therein, The city itself confifts is fituated in a plain of deep fand, for On the 8th of July we arrived at the feat of government in Poland; it being broad and clean, in which are a number of palaces belonging to the of one very narrow, ill-paved, dirty freet, like one of the worst of our Polish grandees. The life and spirit of the place entirely depends on the wine at Warfaw is the nobleft and old narrow streets in the city. The suburbs are very handsome, the roads tendants, in variety of dreffes, make a pretty fight enough. The Hungarian splendid equipages of these Palatines. Their Hussar, Pandour, and Cossack atbest in the world.

[154]

THERE is nothing remarkable in which gave great satisfaction. But of the city of Warsaw except a wooden bridge, just finished, over the Vistoul, all works that can be confiructed by the hand of civilized men, it is one of the oddeft; for it is built of boards and piles, most part of it even with the tions turn their arches under the level arches a confiderable height thereon, water edge. But whereas other nacarriages, when they are at the top of either of those steep hills, rush down which forms a most dangerous pafwith great impetuolity, as if they were this it should feem that the Polanders are not very expert in arts and sciences. They are fond of drinking; and I believe few Christians trouble themfelves lefs for to-morrow than they sage, and as strange an aspect; into the river. of the bridge, they have raifed running headlong do. The peafants in Poland are flaves to their lords, and very robuft. The roads we paffed through from Swametz to Warfaw, are mostly on a flat, but little cultivated lands; but, indeed, our road generally lay through deep and so are those to Silesia; we saw forefts and pine woods.

[186]

Formidolosis ubi latent sylvis feræ.

Poland appears to be a country more belonging to Jews than Christians; for in the distance we travelled through or three Christian villages; all the rest we did not pass through above two it, which was about a thousand miles, we saw or baited at being entirely inhabited by Jews, who were remarkably ill-dreffed, dirty, and abject.

WE

[157]

Poniatowski, then candidate, now king WE made a flay of three months at of Poland, shewed us the greatest ci-Warsaw; where the Polish grandees, and particularly the primate, and count vilities, and are full of urbanity to ftrangers.

FROM

With the second ATTICLES SING WIND DAY OF ANY THE Thurst Care Control of the Control o the state has been a few and the property of the ...

The Man of the Cartie of the Same 1007

FROM

WARSAW TO LONDON.

Gaw, and passed the night in the village ous, and the roads very bad, often N the morning of the 5th of September 1764 we set out from Warof Rava. The next night we lay at Peterboff, and the following at Witawa. breaking our carriage, yet we were not ney, and we got to a frontier place called Though these villages were very ruinprevented from continuing our jourcalled Weriftow, where we lodged, The next day we entered the Prussian territories in Sileha, and paffing through Wartemberg, we found that frontier town well guarded by a Prushan gar-Paffing through Oelz, where the inhabitants cloath themselves after reached in the evening Breflaw, the capital of Silefa, where we had the pleafure of feeing the king of Prusha the fashion of the Hollanders, review fome of his troops.

[991]

AFTER four days of rest we set forward on our journey, and on the 14th, passing through Domslaw, Fordans muble, Nimpsch, we lay at Frankenreffes, there are tolerable good houfes. flein. In these villages, or rather fort-Purfuing mwolfer out from

Purfuing the fame rout next morning, we passed through the fortress of Glatz, which is fituated on an eminence, and is well fortified and garrifoned: in this Bobemia, but the darkness of the night cultivated lands of the fmall towns of tinued as well as all the fortreffes of Germany they demand of travellers their names, whence they came, whither they are Keeping tier. From thence we entered into on we came to Rainetz a Prussan fronobliged us to fet up at a little village, perial fortress; paffing through which, the next morning we saw some well a small distance from Nacbod, an im-Jarowitz, Konigratz, and Clumetz, where we lay. The next day we conand their bufiness. going, tinued our rout through Kenig hat, Numberg, and Liffaw, an imperial fort, at a little distance from which wards the whole day, and part of the night, we came to the city of Prague, the capital of Bobemia, on the 13th runs the river Elbe. Travelling forof September. On the 24th of September we left this city, and during five days journey particularly the citadel of Pillen. The we saw several pretty villages, and roads of Bobemia, through the woods, marp stones, which beat a carriage to pieces, befides not fuffering a traveller are terrible; they are full of rocks and to go above a foot pace; and indeed it is a most tedious way of travelling through ing there very tirefome to an English-man. The situation of the villages about mid-day, and leaving it on the fifth of October, we passed through Creiffeim, we came to the city of Hall some rocks which rife up out of the Closter Heilbrun and Anspack, and lay through Germany; and the bad roads, interspersed through the country, and We came to Nurenberg on the 28th at Feuchwang; the next day through where we found very good the village of Pintzen, and in the water, afford a very pleafing profpect. bron: on the succeeding day we saw more than the extent, makes journeybrought us through Obringen and Hailaccommodations; the following in Suabia, evening

[162]

1 563

[164]

the elector palatine. About the midof buildings, formerly the refidence of dle of next day we reached Manheim; evening arrived at Heidelberg, a city tolerably large, with good streets and the refidence of the electoral court the palatine on the Rbine.

old city of Worms; the next day we country is beautiful, with many vinethe dusk of the evening we got to the following, after four leagues of very bad road, at the village Deminte; towards the next evening we croffed lay at the fortress of Creutznach; yards on the banks of the river. WE continued our rout on and croffing the Rbine, as contrary to fleep as would have been a battery of cannon: the fame ing to the queen of Hungary; it is Eight leagues of very bad road brought foon as I laid down to rest I was immediately waked by the tolling of a dozen belfries: a circumstance well fortified and well garrifoned. the refidence of the elector. It is a melancholy old city, crowded with churches and convents; fo that as disturbance happened at Namur and in many other Roman catholic cities. We came next to Luxemberg, belongthe river Mofelle, and flept in the village of Lifab; on the fucceeding day river, and lay at the city of Triers, we paffed over another arm of thence through the city and fortrefs of Dinan, belonging to the prince of us to the village of Atten; and eight at the village Emptionne; we passed cient fortress towards the upper end of the valley: continuing our journey we lay that night at Florin, which is we then paffed through the fortified Omer's; and so on to Calais, where leagues more, or the next day, to Flamissul: the following night we lay ley, and croffed by the river Maas; under the dominion of the fame prince: ing to France; from thence to St. Liege, which is fituated in a large valennes, Donai, and Bethune, all belongthere are fill some remains of an antowns of Philipvil, Maubege, Valenci-the 30th in the morning we landed in England, and the next day brought us we embarked in the evening. On fafe to London.

[165]

[991]

[167]

0 - Z - 4

